Charitable Giving Strategies

Maximize the impact of your charitable giving while working to minimize taxes

Supporting the causes that are important to you may be a significant part of your current and long-term planning. While giving is driven largely by passion for the causes and the institutions you support, making tax-efficient gifts could be an important part of your giving strategy.

Are you confident with your current charitable giving plan?

- Does your giving strategy coincide with today's tax laws?
- Do you understand that what you give can be just as important as how you give?
- Have you communicated your philanthropic values and goals to your family?
- Are you maximizing gifting strategies that minimize both estate and income taxes?

What can Wilmington Trust Emerald Advisory Services provide?

There are many different ways to give to charity, including outright gifts, private foundations, charitable trusts, and bequests. We'll analyze your situation and philanthropic goals and help you determine the strategy that is most appropriate for your family.

Our team can:

- Analyze the effect of current estate and income tax laws on your short- and long-term charitable giving strategies
- Establish a multigenerational philanthropic plan
- Discuss the development of a family philanthropic mission and vision, and the strategies that may be used to achieve your goals
- Help you create and manage your family foundation utilizing best practices
- Provide modeling of charitable trust strategies and how they might help with tax minimization
